The Master of Arts in Criminal Justice program is unique among other graduate programs in Kentucky due to its focus on social justice and reform, community engagement, social learning, and cultural competency, integrating technology and professional services. This program is valuable for undergraduate students seeking to advance their education and prepare for entry-level and mid-level positions, as well as for teaching positions as adjunct instructors. It is also of value to criminal justice practitioners seeking positions in management or leadership, preparing them to address the unique challenges relating to social justice and reform, and integrated technology within today's criminal justice system. This program is unique in that it provides three cognate options:

- Social Justice and Reform
- Cybersecurity
- Professional Services

PROGRAM OBJECTIVE

Kentucky State University's MCJE program is designed to prepare students for leadership roles in criminal justice with a focus on social justice and reform, community engagement, social learning, and cultural competency, or integrating technology or professional services.

Other benefits of earning a Master of Arts in Criminal Justice Administration include career advancement, specialized knowledge, leadership skills, critical thinking and problem-solving abilities, networking opportunities, and increased earning potential within the criminal justice sector.

“Today's criminal justice professionals need more than practical knowledge to overcome societal challenges. Data-driven decision making and critical thinking are essential for effective problem-solving. This is the point where practical experience and advanced studies connect, and why higher education is vitally important for leaders.”

Dr. Frederick A. Williams Jr., Ph.D., MAJ KSP (ret.)
